Price was also promptly provided. Dealer was prompt in getting back to me. The associate at the dealership was honest and willing to help me out in order to sell the car. Unfortunately, I chose not to purchase the car but the guys were nice, honest, and very helpful. Will not buy a car from here. The car i viewed had a clean carfax and upon inspection I could clearly see that it had work done to it in the drivers side passenger door. Delightful to deal with this dealership! Samantha was extremely helpful and available for all questions. Sorry but not very personal. Their responses to my questions were rather canned and not really clear - so did not pursue the sale The dealer that's I spoke with was amazing and he helped me with all my needs thanks to Harry for the information that I needed. Terrible dealership. Close to purchasing, but the truth was hard to come by with them. Plus I put a deposit down on the vehicle and because of the deception I backed out. Great people but could not help me because of too much Government red tape in obtaining rebates cross province on the Electric vehicle. My son was looking for a car and has decided on something other than the Fiat. Galaxy Motors did reply promptly and followed up. I think they were very efficient and I am disappointed that my son decided to go in a different direction. I thank them for their prompt reply and interest. Crestview contacted me quickly regarding my inquiry. Unfortunately we could not make a deal. I feel they overpriced their Tacoma and really undervalued my one year newer 4Runner that had significantly more options And appeal. I hope they get what they are asking as it looks to be a sharp looking unit. Great friendly service, staff was knowledgeable and answered all my questions regarding the truck I was in! I was contacted right away and had a nice conversation. I have made an offer on the car but have not heard back. I guess I will keep looking. Excellent customer service - responded quickly. Bought our vehicle from this dealer. Dodge resurrected the Charger name in with a modern take on the muscle car silhouette. The menacing headlights and gaping grille that were key to this car also found their way to the current-generation car, which arrived in Then, in , the Charger underwent a major facelift, while maintaining the same underpinnings and interior. This update replaced the large grille with a thin inlet, opening up the lower front grille area below the bumper. Just as significant were the changes to the headlights, taking the "menacing" theme to new places. The Dodge Charger's cabin still honors that retro theme, while blending old and new. The large vintage-looking bezels house modern digital displays. The Charger's rear-wheel-drive RWD platform requires a raised transmission tunnel, lending to the tall center console. This creates a cockpit-like feel for the driver and front passenger. The Charger SXT comes standard with inch alloy wheels, remote start, push-button start, power-adjustable front seats, rear parking sensors, and a 7-inch touchscreen infotainment system. Moving to the GT trim adds several visual touches, including inch wheels, a more pronounced lower front spoiler, rear trunk lip spoiler, and a hood scoop. The GT also provides a fantastic houndstooth pattern in the fabric seats, offering an attractive alternative to leather. The Charger Hellcat features the largest engine in the lineup, as well as leather upholstery, heated and ventilated front seats, heated rear seats, and safety features like blind-spot monitoring. It features more pronounced fenders and wider wheels and tires. The Dodge Charger offers a number of different ways to enjoy the drive, and trim levels correspond with powertrain selection. The V6 and all other engines route power to the rear wheels through an 8-speed automatic transmission with manual tap-shift function. It can un-muffle the sound of the V8 either manually or automatically to unleash the full, raw sound of the engine. It also features Brembo high-performance disc brakes and launch assist, which holds the revs at the ideal point for perfect acceleration from a standstill. It features unique bodywork and the aforementioned wider track, wheels, and tires. The 5. Then there is the Hellcat. Its horsepower will rocket you back in your seat, be it from a standstill or climbing to another level when already at highway speeds. You certainly do feel the weight of the Charger at times. Though never sluggish, some body roll is noticeable in turns. The upgraded suspension in some models levels that out, but it is still present. Both widebody models have Bilstein adaptive suspension, each with their own unique tuning. The combination of wider track and a clever high-tech suspension turn the Charger into a surprisingly precise corner-carver. Perhaps the suspension is necessary to manage the weight of the big V8, but it pays huge dividends on winding back roads. The Brembo brakes are absolutely necessary for the weight, but also contribute to the fantastically dialed-in approach to the Charger's cornering. Dodge provides an incredible amount of information and chassis customizing through the Performance Pages. Located in the center touchscreen, it allows you to record lap times, acceleration runs mph, mph, quarter mile, etc., and monitor engine performance with incredible detail. Just as crucially, Performance Pages provides a number of drive modes and the ability to toggle your own preference for throttle response, transmission mapping, steering feel, suspension feel, and traction control. Few offer as much space as the Dodge Charger. In many performance sedans, the rear seats are an afterthought. But with the Charger, there is plenty of legroom, even with the seats slid back. The driver and front passenger are treated to well-bolstered front bucket seats as well as tons of head- and legroom. The doors feature helpful trays and cup holders and the center console provides a number of quick and easy storage solutions. The Charger also boasts a large trunk, displacing Not only is this better than many performance sedans, but it is also above average even for the large family sedan set. The Charger comes standard with a 7-inch touchscreen infotainment system. All other trims of the Charger feature an 8. Both screen sizes run FCA's outstanding Uconnect infotainment system. More than anything, this system shines thanks to its simplicity. The main screen features a lower dock of icons for media, climate, controls, phone, and settings. No matter which menu you end up on, those docked icons are always there. This ensures you can quickly jump to another function without the added step of backing out of menus. When using Apple CarPlay, other rival systems require going to CarPlay's home screen, finding the automaker's icon, and pressing that to get back into the native infotainment system. This ensures you can jump between Uconnect and your preferred mobile device infotainment system with ease. This logical menu layout carries over to the standard digital display screen at the center of the instrument panel. It is operated via a directional pad on the steering wheel and allows for easy cycling through functions like a trip computer, digital speedometer, vehicle settings, radio station, and phone call information. This screen also presents turn-by-turn directions for the available navigation system. Standard safety features on the Dodge Charger include a full array of front- and side-impact airbags, traction control, and rear parking sensors. Available safety features include forward-collision avoidance with automatic emergency braking, lane-departure warning, lane-keeping assist, adaptive cruise control, and automatic high-beams. These are helpful options, but many other sedans on the market today provide some version of these features as standard equipment. Other safety options include blind-spot monitoring, rear cross-traffic alert, and rain-sensing windshield wipers. Once again, these are options, and other rival sedans, like the Toyota Avalon, provide them as standard features. Thanks to its powerful engines and heavier platform, the Charger falls behind other sedans on fuel economy. Adding AWD to the mix brings fuel economy down to 18 mpg city, 27 highway, 21 combined. The least efficient version of the Charger is the Hellcat Widebody, returning 12 mpg city, 21 highway, 15 combined. It's hard to consider the cost-effectiveness of a product with so few peers. Sure, the base sedan has its conventional rivals, but a Toyota Avalon customer is likely not the same as a Dodge Charger customer. Furthermore, no car in the large family sedan segment has the performance ceiling of the Charger. Conversely, few cars with horsepower offer four doors, a comfortable second row, and a large trunk. If the marriage of practicality and performance is what you seek, the Charger delivers in its many forms. I asked multiple times for at least a picture of the truck I was interested in. I was told by Mitch the sales manager that someone would be in touch, no one was. I was emailed by Chrissy after the initial CarGurus inquiry. Never heard back. Horrible experience. We drove from LA to Hemet to purchase 3 cars. The manager did not honor the price we found through CarGurus. Are you serious! I don't know what kind of employees they have, but both the sales and manager we're horrible. The sales guys kept speaking using bad words while we were there. Waste of time, do not believe the advertised price. Salesman gave me all the information over the phone he was very knowledgeable and informative. Typical old school car sales tactics. They were responsive, but on sales script. Drove in front out of town just to be told the car sold over night, no courtesy call or any form of notification even after setting up an appointment. All I got from them was stupid sales tactics and "its just human error what more can we say". John at the sales department was very patient with me over the phone. Thank you for your great customer service! Felt dishonest; no sale. Dealer is unable to give out the door pricing on a used vehicle over the phone. How difficult is it to add sales tax and registration on to the advertised vehicle sale price? Dealership communication with customers needs to be improved. I was in the middle of negotiations and they suddenly never got back to me? Never gave a reason. Was a serious buyer. Of well. Finally they say, no price will be discussed unless you go in. What the hell! Kept asking the sells man why it was so high. Non sense. I drove almost an hour out of my way for this deal and left empty handed. Dealership is advertising a lower price than what is actually offered. They add 4K in preinstalled dealership options to all their advertised pricing. So if it looks to good to be true, it is. No customer should be surprised in this manner as it feels deceiving. All businesses should be transparent with the price advertised. Have a good day! The whole team did a wonderful job to get me the car I wanted. Very hard to get consistent communication from this dealer. Just tells you the payment and expects you to say yes. I did not purchased this truck. I scheduled an appt to test drive this truck but when I checked the price again the day of the appt, the price was changed. There quick response, customer friendly and very professional. My next purchase will be with HCDJ. Talk about a rip-off made me drive an hour to tell me they raised the price another Bad business also waisted my time in the dealership for another two hours.. They tried to add a bunch of other fees that were not listed and was told I had to pay for them. The price listed was after all the rebates that most people do not meet. The manager was rude and arrogant. Dealer never has this truck ready for a drive test. I been asking too many times but nothing happen. So why they still keep listing it if they don't have it ready? All I wanted was an out the door price. Never got an answer. Got several emails on how may we help you replied to all to no avail sent an email to general manager also never acknowledged. Absolutely a bait and switch. They will not sell anything at the advertised prices. The advertised price is a complete lie. Got a blank email from them on the car I was intrested in and no follow up whatsoever. Someone initially texted me a greeting, but it took two days for someone to call me with the information on the car that I was inquiring about. The car was not ready for sale, and the paperwork took hours to complete due to insufficient staff. All phony dirty tactics they advertise sale price when you get there they claim they added on extras I'll never buy from them. Yes they contact me very friendly and I am really appreciate it from dealer management. My experience with this dealer has been consistent with what people giving 1 Star have said. They advertised a really good price for a new Ram I sent an inquiry about it and they quickly responded with a quote explaining the price. The quote had more rebates than I have ever seen, so I responded asking about them. I never heard back. I then received a follow up email about my original question. I asked again about the rebates. America's ongoing fascination with muscle cars expresses itself very clearly in the Dodge Charger. While the new Challenger coupe reflects its origins more clearly, the Dodge Charger sedan combines four doors with a range of engines now capped by the legendary Hellcat Hemi, which offers a staggering horsepower in the new Charger SRT Hellcat. With rear-wheel drive rather than front-wheel drive since , the new Dodge Charger may never acquire the collectability of older models, it is a very traditional American car by its look, sound, and feel. I purchased the car. The sales associate Mark and the office lady, Rocio, were both very nice and professional. They were accomodating and kind. Negotiating went as one would expect but overall I enjoyed the experience and the car. Car was listed for one price called got told to put an application in to qualify for the vehicle and I did. The General Lee! Yeehaw, nuff said, boys! Luke and Beau Duke made the Dodge Charger the iconic car of racing fans everywhere. It's a tough choice which car is cooler, the or '69 Dodge Charger, especially since the model changed little. A split front grille and recessed rectangular taillights were designed to give an even sportier look to the car. The optional bumblebee striping was altered slightly. Engine choices were still the , , Magnum, and Hemi. For economically challenged drivers who still wanted the look of a sports car, Chrysler offered a slant-six ci, bhp model. The Daytona was a longer car with a distinct rear tail stabilizing wing that rose 23 inches in the air. Only were built with either a Magnum or Hemi engine. He answers my questions quick and has always been available to give me the info I requested. Like its competitors from Ford, Chevy, Pontiac and others, the Charger ushered in the muscle-car era with a 2-door coupe, and subsequently lived on through several iterations, including a rather forgettable front-wheel-drive FWD , 4-cylinder model in the s the turbocharged Shelby variant being a notable exception. After about 20 years, the Charger name had run its course and was dropped by Dodge. Fast forward to That partnership would prove to be short-lived, but among the byproducts was an all-new Dodge Charger based in part on the

Mercedes-Benz E-Class. Offered as a 5-passenger, 4-door sedan with coupe-like styling meant to pay homage to earlier examples, the Charger placed Dodge once again in the full-size, rear-wheel-drive RWD car segment. And, in what has come to be Charger tradition, that model was available with a potent V8 under the hood. In the years since, the Charger lineup has added several high-performance versions, available all-wheel drive AWD , and a variety of engines. CarGurus has tested various versions of Charger in recent years and recognized them with these commendable overall scores: 7. Pros : Powerful engines, available AWD, generous interior and trunk space, comfort Cons : Dated platform, poor city fuel economy for even base V6 models, lacks many leading technology features. For , the Charger received what the casual observer likely perceived to be a mild refresh but was, in fact, a thorough redesign. Behind the scenes was an all-new chassis with revised suspension tuning and more responsive steering, while the exterior was made even more aggressive thanks to scowled headlights and an LED taillight panel that spanned the width of the car. Interior materials were upgraded and, for the base engine, engineers opted for a horsepower 3. Less efficient was the horsepower 5. Other enhancements included safety features such as a blind-spot monitoring and forward-collision warning, an 8. Also notable was the return of the Charger SRT8 model, now sporting a horsepower 6. A wallflower, the SRT8 was not. Once again, the chassis was retuned and fitted with more lightweight components, and the efficient 8-speed automatic transmission became standard across the board. More revisions were made to the Charger trim levels in These Chargers featured fender flares and wide tires that increased overall width by 3. All engines were paired with a 5-speed automatic transmission. All Dodge Chargers performed well in government crash tests and were well equipped, though buyers could opt for desirable options such as a rear DVD entertainment system or UConnect touch-screen infotainment system. The Charger followed with only minor changes, but more noteworthy updates were in store. Standard side-curtain airbags were added for the model year. Be that as it may, for shoppers who want space and comfort in sedan form, the dated Charger sedan remains a solid choice, especially given the departure of competitors such as the Chevrolet Impala , Buick LaCrosse , and Ford Taurus. Though not direct alternatives, the Honda Accord , Nissan Maxima , and Toyota Camry are also cross-shopped by those considering the purchase of a Charger. America's ongoing fascination with muscle cars expresses itself very clearly in the Dodge Charger. The seventh-generation Charger was introduced for the model year and underwent a facelift for the model year, with more modern styling. Despite the facelift, the LX platform that underpins the new Charger also underpinned the previous-generation Charger. Dodge has made the most of this platform, but it sure has some years on it. It's also available in a host of colors like Yellow Jacket, White Knuckle, Go Mango, and TorRed, all to make the Charger stand out among a parking lot full of boring sedans. It manages to be menacing, but in a more subdued manner. In past years, the SE was the base Charger trim, but it's been dropped for That leaves the SXT as the entry-level trim. The SXT Plus adds fog lamps, power heated but manual-folding outside mirrors, all-season performance tires, inch aluminum wheels, dual-zone automatic temperature control, an auto-dimming rear-view mirror, power eight-way driver's seat, heated front seats, and a stereo with six premium speakers. It also features a flat-bottom performance steering wheel with integrated paddle shifters. Our test car was the GT Plus. In addition to AWD, it comes with heated and cooled seats and a heated steering wheel. Otherwise, it has many of the additional features from the SXT plus, as well as access to other option packages. The Scat Pack also includes inch satin aluminum wheels, cloth performance seats, and Brembo performance brakes. Visually, the Daytona features a blacked-out grille, projector LED fog lamps, an aluminum hood with high center hood scoop, inch forged aluminum wheels, bright metal brake pedals, and specially designed perforated seats unique to the Daytona. The Daytona offers many of the same features as the Daytona, but with the upgraded cubic-inch V8. Moving to the SRT , performance becomes even more focused. This trim features red Brembo brake calipers, a high-performance active damping suspension, body-color rear spoiler, inch SRT wheels, and a host of unique SRT interior touches. It delivers horsepower and pound-feet of torque, sent through an 8-speed automatic transmission. With most trims, power is sent to the rear wheels, but with the GT, power is sent to all four. It makes horsepower and pound-feet of torque. That engine has a displacement of cubic inches, hence the name. Above all other versions is the Charger Hellcat, fitted with a supercharged 6. It makes an absurd hp and lb-ft of torque. If you live where it snows, AWD pays dividends in improved winter driving capability. On dry surfaces AWD provides better cornering abilities, seemingly evening out the typical roll that comes with cornering this beefy sedan. The Charger gives you a few ways to tune and liven up your driving experience. You get steering-wheel-mounted paddle shifters, a tap-shift manual mode on the actual shifter, and a Sport-mode button in the dash. The Sport button would be better if it were located on the steering wheel so you can mash it with your thumb without looking , or down on the center console near the other drive-mode toggle buttons. Our Charger GT, even with the base V6, had great acceleration and provided strong braking. That braking inspires confidence, allowing you to push the Charger in normal driving situations. The most efficient Charger is one with RWD and the V6, which returns 19 mpg city, 30 highway, 23 combined. Our AWD V6 setup returns 18 mpg city, 27 highway, 21 combined, but in a week of combined city and highway driving, our test model came up a little short of that, with The least-efficient version is the Charger Hellcat, which gets just 13 mpg in the city, 22 highway, 16 combined. For a car this size, the front seat is not massively spacious, although the seats themselves are comfortable. For front-seat passengers, the GT model presents a unique issue. The added drivetrain components for the AWD system result in a hump on the right side of the center transmission tunnel that cuts into front-passenger legroom. Front-seat occupants benefit from cubbies in the doors, a large center console bin, and a small compartment below the climate controls that's perfect for your wallet, phone, and keys. The second row of the Charger is quite spacious, even for this vehicle class. It provides plenty of legroom, although you have to lower your head a bit to get into the rear seat. The drivetrain hump is not that large, so you can shimmy across from one seat to another. The Charger provides up to The Charger comes standard with the very easy-to-use Uconnect system. This system has been the gold standard for infotainment for the past few years. It replaces the smaller 5-inch screen that was in base models from Literally every other trim gets the larger 8, This large infotainment system has a tablet-like layout. It allows for extremely simple navigation through various menus. Dodge has added a reversing camera and rear parking sensors as standard equipment across the lineup for These two features join already-standard front- and side-impact airbags, active head restraints, the LATCH child-seat anchoring system, and a tire pressure monitoring system. You can also get available safety features like blind-spot warning with rear cross-path detection, which were both on our Charger GT as optional equipment. However, cars like the Toyota Camry already offer many of these features as standard equipment. So any rival making you pay extra for these safety technologies is slipping. Our test model also included the available Navigation package and larger inch painted dark wheels. The Charger competes with other family sedans only in that it has four doors, four wheels, and seats five. It has much more personality than the rest of the segment, although cornerstone family sedans like the Honda Accord and Toyota Camry have finally started to deliver in that department. Those models have started to embrace more aggressive styling, and in some cases they even deliver on the looks with decent acceleration and cornering. But those rival sedans merely dip their toes into the performance realm. If you want a car designed from the start to be fun that still covers the basics of the family sedan, few do it with the swagger of the Dodge Charger. Coronavirus update: New contactless services to help keep you safe. This Dealer contacted me, but unfortunately I didn't do business with them because I bought a car in another place maybe next time I will do business with them thanks guys. This is our 4th car purchased from STG. Great service from the moment we stepped onto the lot until the close of the deal. Pedro who help us the whole time was amazing. Car came with one key, I believe even though car was used it should have came with two keys, additional expense on our behalf. This site is fake when you get to the dealer they dont have what you pre qualified then they try to sell you something 4 yomes for expensive I will never try this site again or recommend it to anyone or the dealer I went to. It took 2 days for them to find the car. The car advertised was a mess. Frame damage and no back seat. That information was clearly left out so that i would be lured onto the lot. They wasted my time making the trip there. I will cross them off my list completely as i cannot trust that kind of shady business. I've been told the car is going through their inspection process and they will contact me when its available. My experience with RAO dealership was very nice. I was able to test drive more than one vehicle they explained and details about the condition of each and every car that they have and how it was serviced once they acquired it. They do a great job of reconditioning used cars so that you get a good used car. My experience was great. I bought this car in Norco. Ben brought this car to me in Covina. He delivered and I received the best deal. He went above and beyond to make sure that the little cosmetic parts were replaced. He is still working with me until this day! Thank you for your time and consideration! Thank you for adding the extras that I wanted on my beautiful Black Beauty!!! Good experience will be going back. They worked a deal with me. Not like other dealers. Thumbs up to Daniel the salesman good worker, better person. Went to look at this car based on pictures on cargurus. Was told by the lady that answered the phone they were open til 8pm but when I arrived at 7pm was informed that they were only open til 7pm. Dealer was OK, Car was a little rough with check engine light on and empty on fuel. Second I'm a disabled Vet and is not handicap accessible. The staff spend more time talking to each other then helping. Not to mention majority of their cars, including the one I was interested in are " As is, no Warranty". Dealer internet rep Mike was very responsive, promptly answered all my questions, and provided timely info on vehicle availability. I was immediately contacted by Abel. I asked him what the total price would be out-the-door and he never returned that simple request. Based upon their many previous reviews, I didn't expect them to honor the advertised price, anyway. Short negotiation. They do have ad ons which were not advertised but we were able to work it out quickly. I asked for some numbers, seller did not wanted to help until i schedule a test drive and an in person meeting. The price was too low and as soon i enquired the vehicle was removed from inventory, the seller insisted in setting an appointment but he failed to tell me the car was not on inventory. A fish and bait tactic. Showed up, test drove the car, and closed deal in just over an hour. Was willing to work with my credit union and drove car home that day. Overall good experience. Laid back atmosphere. Would definitely deal with them again. Premium has been good to me. I live in another county and have been emailing them about a car. They have been gracious and understanding my situation, I will be getting car from them, when time permits. I spoke to them. They were very nice. Although I didn't test drive or buy a car from them. Rude service. Salesman was too lazy to move a few cars so I could test drive the one I wanted. Wanted to run credit first without me even starting the car. We all know that's how you lose points on your report. He didn't care to offer to help any further after I told him I wouldn't run my credit without first test driving the car. Wish I could give 0 stars. I came in with financing ready and to buy the vehicle I looked at. They would not budge on the dealer fee. That was a deal breaker for me. I was one of two people to walk out upset in the 30 min I was there. I want to thanks STG Autogroup for the Smoth transaction, and all the personal involved, specially to Daniel the sales person that help me to get my loan ,All good. Kevin answered my showed me the car and answered my questions with no pressure. I had a very good experience. Inextricably linked to a working-class, blue-collar, brute-force, muscle-car image, the Dodge Charger is a much better automobile than most people bother to learn. A favorite of pimple-ridden teenage boys, law-enforcement agencies, rental-car companies, and men suffering midlife crises, the aggressively styled and domineeringly powered Charger is the antithesis of the average Accord, the cure for the common Camry. First, the Charger speaks with a German accent. It is based on a rear-drive platform that dates to the mids, one that used bits and pieces from old Mercedes-Benz E-Class and S-Class models when it was first engineered. Plus, its 8-speed automatic transmission hails from Germany. Second, the Charger is built by London-based Fiat Chrysler Automobiles in a Canadian factory, and more than a quarter of its parts are sourced from Mexico. So, is this an American car? Not by the standards most people use. Third, try not to base assumptions on the last Charger you rented at an airport. Rental cars are shoddily kept and usually reflect a fraction of the equipment that might be offered. Admittedly, the result looks totally obnoxious, and in this bright B5 Blue paint color, the Charger draws lots of attention. Some of it is positive. Some of it is negative. Granted, the dashboard is plain and the surface texturing is simplistic, but quality levels are relatively high.

From the fabric roof-pillar covers and soft-touch dashboard to the real aluminum trim and refined controls, the Charger impresses. Especially at its price, and in spite of the image people hold of it, the Dodge Charger is unexpectedly sophisticated. And that opinion extends to its driving character, too. An all-wheel-drive AWD system is an option for both trim levels, making the Charger perfect for climates that regularly experience inclement weather. My test car had every performance-oriented upgrade. The Blacktop Appearance Package installed inch wheels. The Rallye Group increased engine output to an even horsepower. The Super Track Pak option added a performance-tuned suspension, performance brakes, a 3. A Performance Pages function is also a part of the Super Track Pak, providing the ability to record and track performance data while driving. Quick and rewarding to drive, a Charger outfitted like my test car offers enormous grip and outstanding braking capability. The electric steering is satisfying at all times, and because my test vehicle employed the smallest and lightest engine combined with the biggest and stickiest tires, it dove into corners with giggle-worthy enthusiasm. Under normal driving conditions, such as commuting in the suburbs, the city, and on freeways, the Charger is equally delightful. The driver sits far back in the cabin, which can block the view of overhead traffic lights if the Charger is first in line at an intersection, but aside from occasionally challenging outward visibility issues, which are largely resolved by a reversing camera and an available blind-spot warning system with rear cross-traffic alert, this big Dodge suffers few flaws in terms of its daily drivability. The driver grips a thick-rimmed steering wheel with a pleasing shape, and the places where elbows commonly rest are soft and padded. Rear-seat accommodations are generous, too. The seating is reclined a bit too much for my preferences, but the cushions are comfortable and provide commendable thigh support. My test car had rear-seat air vents, heated outboard seat cushions, and two USB ports, but it also had flimsy looking hard plastic front seatback covers that came across as cheap and nothing more. As far as trunk space is concerned, the Charger supplies more room than any midsize family sedan. However, its In the grand scheme of things, these are minor issues. Dodge offers unexpectedly advanced convenience, infotainment, and safety technologies for the Charger and at relatively affordable price points. There are a few shortcomings with the infotainment system, however. The USB port is inside the center console, where it is hard to access. Finally, Uconnect remains occasionally slow to start and to respond to inputs. You can also upgrade the Charger with a number of driver-assistance and collision-avoidance technologies, including forward-collision warning with automatic emergency braking, blind-spot monitoring with rear cross-traffic alert, lane-departure warning and lane-keeping assist technologies, and more. One thing that irritated me about the Charger was how tough it was to use the LATCH anchors with my specific child safety seat design. I almost gave up, but ultimately achieved success. In other crash-test assessments, the Charger earns top ratings from both the federal government and the IIHS, combined with a Superior rating for its crash-avoidance technology. Not only are these versions of the Charger affordable, they save money on gas. Remember, I got The Charger also ranks highly in J. Power surveys. Well, two of them anyway. Last year, the car won an award for its overall appeal, and it rated highly for initial quality. Society often dictates that image is everything, which I think is sad. When it comes to the Dodge Charger, there is far more substance here than meets the eye. periods of time in getting back with me. Yes the lady I had talked to was from the same town I live after a brief chat we had! All the details were not quite clear on the truck as they were detailing it and she went out of her way to get those details for me and called me back. Unfortunately it was not a crewcab 4 door and did not have 4 wheel drive. Very ready to assist she was. I'm not done with them because is too soon and i will come back when im ready. Horrible experience do not even bother I warn you!! It was very pleasant experience! Aaron was my salesman and I would highly recommend him! I had a great experience with the Maserati dealership. I look forward to purchasing another vehicle for my wife. Total waste of time. What on earth is that point of that? The best thing to engage with them on, is to provide advice on how to run their business competitively without lying to consumers! If they take the advice you should the invoice them. Really positive experience working with Jose and this dealership. The information they readily provided and their willingness to spend time on an out of state customer were exceptional. They found the answer to each of my questions AND called me back in the time frame they indicated. I do not hesitate to recommend Jose and his excellent dealership. Was contacted by dealer only to be told, very bluntly, the vehicle I wanted was sold. No biggie. However the sales associate I spoke with made no further attempt to right fit me into a vehicle. Didn't bother asking questions on what I was looking and didn't respond when I asked why the vehicle was still be promoted through their own website if it has been "sold over a week ago" as he mentioned. Did not know any of the options on the car. Would only reveal if I went in person. Place was real busy on the weekend Car that was advertised for price advertised at a great rate, great experience start to finish. Said I would have to tell!? Like its competitors from Ford, Chevy, Pontiac and others, the Charger ushered in the muscle-car era with a 2-door coupe, and subsequently lived on through several iterations, including a rather forgettable front-wheel-drive FWD , 4-cylinder model in the s the turbocharged Shelby variant being a notable exception. After about 20 years, the Charger name had run its course and was dropped by Dodge. Fast forward to That partnership would prove to be short-lived, but among the byproducts was an all-new Dodge Charger based in part on the Mercedes-Benz E-Class. Offered as a 5-passenger, 4-door sedan with coupe-like styling meant to pay homage to earlier examples, the Charger placed Dodge once again in the full-size, rear-wheel-drive RWD car segment. And, in what has come to be Charger tradition, that model was available with a potent V8 under the hood. In the years since, the Charger lineup has added several high-performance versions, available all-wheel drive AWD , and a variety of engines. CarGurus has tested various versions of Charger in recent years and recognized them with these commendable overall scores: 7. Pros : Powerful engines, available AWD, generous interior and trunk space, comfort Cons : Dated platform, poor city fuel economy for even base V6 models, lacks many leading technology features. For , the Charger received what the casual observer likely perceived to be a mild refresh but was, in fact, a thorough redesign. Behind the scenes was an all-new chassis with revised suspension tuning and more responsive steering, while the exterior was made even more aggressive thanks to scowled headlights and an LED taillight panel that spanned the width of the car. Interior materials were upgraded and, for the base engine, engineers opted for a horsepower 3. Less efficient was the horsepower 5. Other enhancements included safety features such as a blind-spot monitoring and forward-collision warning, an 8. Also notable was the return of the Charger SRT8 model, now sporting a horsepower 6. A wallflower, the SRT8 was not. Once again, the chassis was retuned and fitted with more lightweight components, and the efficient 8-speed automatic transmission became standard across the board. More revisions were made to the Charger trim levels in These Chargers featured fender flares and wide tires that increased overall width by 3. All engines were paired with a 5-speed automatic transmission. All Dodge Chargers performed well in government crash tests and were well equipped, though buyers could opt for desirable options such as a rear DVD entertainment system or UConnect touch-screen infotainment system. The Charger followed with only minor changes, but more noteworthy updates were in store. Standard side-curtain airbags were added for the model year. Be that as it may, for shoppers who want space and comfort in sedan form, the dated Charger sedan remains a solid choice, especially given the departure of competitors such as the Chevrolet Impala , Buick LaCrosse , and Ford Taurus. Though not direct alternatives, the Honda Accord , Nissan Maxima , and Toyota Camry are also cross-shopped by those considering the purchase of a Charger. America's ongoing fascination with muscle cars expresses itself very clearly in the Dodge Charger. While the new Challenger coupe reflects its origins more clearly, the Dodge Charger sedan combines four doors with a range of engines now capped by the legendary Hellcat Hemi, which offers a staggering horsepower in the new Charger SRT Hellcat. With rear-wheel drive rather than front-wheel drive since , the new Dodge Charger may never acquire the collectability of older models, it is a very traditional American car by its look, sound, and feel. No hassle dealership, we got a fair deal on our trade-in. If you visit ask for Umair as he will take good care of you. Omar in finance thank you for making it all happen. Bad experience , seems like you are dealing with 2 negotiations, the guy that shows you the car and the guy that does the paper work, they don't honor what the first guy tell you, at the end you end up paying high fees for everything, be careful when you go to this dealership. I had a great experience with this purchase. The representatives, like Trisha and Mike in the business office displayed professionalism and awesome customer service. My sales representative, Djamal listened to me, he was not pushy, or overbearing. I would definitely recommend Ziegler dealership for your next purchase. Shelby has been great to communicate with. I determined AWD was a must for me so she kept her eye out for one coming in. I found one prior to that happening. The finance Manager was rude and unwilling to negotiate the lower price. The staff was friendly and understanding. Fast response from the dealership. I on the other hand am dealing with the dynamic nature of when we would be back in the office. Therefore have not yet made my move. They reached out but I didn't move forward with the car as I decided on something else. Was a good experience and not pushy. The manager was loud and aggressive regarding the extra 1, warranty they place on every car they sale. The sales person was nice and upfront. Had the best experience from great listing to the 1 st call all the way down to the dreaded part of signing the paperwork. These guys are great to work with. Excellent customer service. Highly recommended. Jeremiah Deyoung was very friendly and helpful I would highly recommend him and Phillips Chevrolet. Had an appointment to see the Jeep and they sold it before my appointment. I thought they were going to hold it for me, they didn't even contact me about it. They have been in contact with me regarding the the vehicle. Very kind and looking forward to meeting in person. We drove over two hours to check out and potentially buy a car. When we got there the dealer informed us someone else just got approved! Poor communication and a wasted day is all we experienced through this dealership. Circumstances changed on my end but Erika was very timely in reaching out to me regarding my inquiry. Every dealership has fallen extremely short on customer service. Elite is only the second dealership to fulfil my requests out of Sales man only kept saying "this is too much truck" for you, only to try to sell me a vehicle that wasn't not on the lot yet that I had no interest in. I havnt talked to anyone over the phone but the gentleman seemed eager to help if i had questions. Great experience friendly knowledgeable terrible parking in area. Over all would recommend. I explained that I was really to far away to be a customer and they understood my position and have respected my decision to shop elsewhere. Only had some back and forth communication but seemed willing to help and work with you. The sales staff was excellent they had a good price on the truck it was a very simple process I would buy from them again. Over contact Told them I wanted one specific vehicle a jeep , wouldn't budge on price over email yet still email me everyday. I ultimately purchased w another dealership. Only the person who handles the web inquiries contacted me. She said sales would but they never did. Now the car is sold. Contacted dealer and made sure it was there and made an appointment for the next day, they called the morning of and confirmed. I drove 1. Strong recommendation to stay clear of this place! They were typical car salesman. Say anything to get you to buy the car. Cry about how we wanted to much for our trade-in, which was probably true. We did get the car we wanted and it was probably a fair deal. I went to buy a car but they said its a wholesale car. Moreover car keys is not available. What kind of a car dealer is that? Extremely professional!! My salesperson Harvey was personable and had the deal done and I was out the door in about 2hrs. Great Dealership to deal with very satisfied! I've sent them detailed emails explaining what I am looking for but for some reason they will not reply to me regarding any dealings or the vehicle. Fantastic customer service. John and his crew really made tbhe effort to not make it feel like I was buying a vehicle. This dealership seems customer-centric. And the deals are unbeatable! Heck, I drove over miles to purchase my vehicle from here, that's how good the deal was. The car advertised had accident damage and was not disclosed in the ad. The car was not even clean inside. Wasted half a day for nothing. Wouldn't send even an overall picture so the internet people won't go outside I guess. Several days later they said it went to auction and wasn't available. They offered to meet me me to look at a new vehicle David tried really hard but Toyota finance wanted much more than I could offer. Yes, I would recommend this dealership and David. When I mentioned using a power of attorney to have someone sign for me they stopped responding. Got helped by Christopher Lopez cool guy he was helpful and made the process easy. Thanks to him I got my hands on a beautiful Camaro 2ss. I drove an hour to find out that the truck I wanted was in the shop. Then the salesman tells me that it won't available until it gets back from the body shop, so they then tell me that it will back in about a month. I then get a call stating that the truck was sold to someone else. I was so disappointed when I got the news. I don't recommend this place for anyone. Marking up cars that most other dealers aren't, low offers on trade in and not willing to even discuss prices. Save your time and go elsewhere. Great customer service, they were able to get me the best offer and the one that I wanted. My salesman Ari was very helpful and Paul is very knowledgeable. Thanks guys! They help you with what you are looking for and never give up on helping you get your car. Very friendly and attentive, helpful made appointment right away with a reminder and followup. Great communication. Answered all my questions and bought the car. No back and forth trying to add items.. The people are very professional and find the way to help you to get the car you want I will go back if I get another car. The first time I called , they transferred me to a sales line, left a message , but never got a call back. I was very specific in my inquiry, and they did not have that color in stock. I had no issues with the second follow up. Best experience at a dealer ever. Our salesman Mo was so helpful. I highly recommend everyone go see him. More than 3 representatives have contacted me. However, no one had answers for my questions nor did they reply with answers. It was good and they were pleasant - not pushy or anything. So I had no problems with them whatsoever. I just ended up fixing my old car and not buying a new one. Very responsive called me back right after I hit submit. Answered my inquiry question promptly and without being overwhelming. Car was pre-sold. They are automatically listing all units as a way of generating sales contacts, but did stop calling once I asked. Helpful but could not find car. Liked that they had options to order, Very informative and educational experience. Great public relations. This Dealer contacted me, but unfortunately I didn't do business with them because I bought a car in another place maybe next time I will do business with them thanks guys. Sales Associate Richard Schwartz was very prompt and extremely professional. He answered all the necessary questions and was able to provide my wife and I the very best service possible. The easiest vehicle transaction we've ever experienced thus far. Dealer internet rep Mike was very responsive, promptly answered all my questions, and provided timely info on vehicle availability. It's very clear how this dealer work and the word that comes to mind is conniving. Even if we agreed on a price after all this, I wouldn't trust them. Great selection of used cars. Many sales personal available willing to work with you. Will buy again from them. Like its competitors from Ford, Chevy, Pontiac and others, the Charger ushered in the muscle-car era with a 2-door coupe, and subsequently lived on through several iterations, including a rather forgettable front-wheel-drive FWD , 4-cylinder model in the s the turbocharged Shelby variant being a notable exception. After about 20 years, the Charger name had run its course and was dropped by Dodge. Fast forward to That partnership would prove to be short-lived, but among the byproducts was an all-new Dodge Charger based in part on the Mercedes-Benz E-Class. Offered as a 5-passenger, 4-door sedan with coupe-like styling meant to pay homage to earlier examples, the Charger placed Dodge once again in the full-size, rear-wheel-drive RWD car segment. And, in what has come to be Charger tradition, that model was available with a potent V8 under the hood. In the years since, the Charger lineup has added several high-performance versions, available all-wheel drive AWD , and a variety of engines. CarGurus has tested various versions of Charger in recent years and recognized them with these commendable overall scores: 7. Pros : Powerful engines, available AWD, generous interior and trunk space, comfort Cons : Dated platform, poor city fuel economy for even base V6 models, lacks many leading technology features. For , the Charger received what the casual observer likely perceived to be a mild refresh but was, in fact, a thorough redesign. Behind the scenes was an all-new chassis with revised suspension tuning and more responsive steering, while the exterior was made even more aggressive thanks to scowled headlights and an LED taillight panel that spanned the width of the car. Interior materials were upgraded and, for the base engine, engineers opted for a horsepower 3. Less efficient was the horsepower 5. Other enhancements included safety features such as a blind-spot monitoring and forward-collision warning, an 8. Also notable was the return of the Charger SRT8 model, now sporting a horsepower 6. A wallflower, the SRT8 was not. Once again, the chassis was retuned and fitted with more lightweight components, and the efficient 8-speed automatic transmission became standard across the board. More revisions were made to the Charger trim levels in These Chargers featured fender flares and wide tires that increased overall width by 3. All engines were paired with a 5-speed automatic transmission. All Dodge Chargers performed well in government crash tests and were well equipped, though buyers could opt for desirable options such as a rear DVD entertainment system or UConnect touch-screen infotainment system. The Charger followed with only minor changes, but more noteworthy updates were in store. Standard side-curtain airbags were added for the model year. Be that as it may, for shoppers who want space and comfort in sedan form, the dated Charger sedan remains a solid choice, especially given the departure of competitors such as the Chevrolet Impala , Buick LaCrosse , and Ford Taurus. Though not direct alternatives, the Honda Accord , Nissan Maxima , and Toyota Camry are also cross-shopped by those considering the purchase of a Charger. America's ongoing fascination with muscle cars expresses itself very clearly in the Dodge Charger. While the new Challenger coupe reflects its origins more clearly, the Dodge Charger sedan combines four doors with a range of engines now capped by the legendary Hellcat Hemi, which offers a staggering horsepower in the new Charger SRT Hellcat. With rear-wheel drive rather than front-wheel drive since , the new Dodge Charger may never acquire the collectability of older models, it is a very traditional American car by its look, sound, and feel.
